Street Vendors in China.

One of the characteristic features of street life in a Chinese village is the large number of small tables or stands along the street kept by vendors of peanuts, cakes, confectionery, fruits, and the like, on which the goods sold are arranged in small piles for sale at a small price—a handful of peanuts for 10 cash, for example, or a cent, and so on. Passersby pick up their purchase and proceed to consume it.

WORK BEING RUSHED ON BIG ARMY CAMP AT BATTLE CREEK

Wisconsin Men Who Will Train at Camp Custer Will Be Interested In What Is Being Done.

Wisconsin men who will be sent to the army cantonment, Camp Custer, at Battle Creek, Mich., will be interested to know that this camp is to be featured in the August number of the Army and Navy News, an official publication of the war department.

United States motor truck company Number 51, in charge of Captain Bailey of the quartermaster's department of the regular army, is already on the ground at Camp Custer. The trucks are 1½-ton Kelly-Springfields, and will be used for hauling heavy material.

Construction work has already started on the paved road to be built inside the cantonment. This contract has been let to Baker Brothers of Detroit, and a score of teams are already on the job.

This paved road will be eighteen feet wide, and will be of concrete. It will stretch the entire distance of the cantonment buildings better than four miles. This road will be north and east of the buildings, and the Bell Line road will parallel this. All the grading for the concrete road will be made with wheelbarrows.

All gravel used in the construction of the concrete road will be brought from a pit near Kalamazoo. This will be brought in cars and unloaded by a crane.

Cement for the work will be hauled in by railroad, and it is expected that the fact that a railroad runs along the side pavement of the road will be the expense of this will be greatly cut down.

Baker Brothers, the contracting firm, have all the equipment necessary to do the work. Like all of the rest of the cantonment work, the pavement construction is held back by the lack of railroad facilities.

This far carloads of lumber have been arriving just a little faster than they could be handled, but with a railroad to the barracks completed, more cars a day will be needed.

The limits of Camp Custer have been reduced by the government and the cantonment grounds are decreased in size from 7,500 acres to 5,000 acres, this having the effect of cutting the cantonment limits in a quarter of a mile in all directions.

With this new arrangement completed, it is expected that all trouble about the amount of land required will be ended. The original estimate was 800 acres. From this point the limits have been steadily expanded.

Major Curry, who is in charge of the sanitary features of the camp construction, has compelled all employees of construction companies to undergo a vaccination to prevent typhoid.

The first permanent officer for Camp Custer has just been appointed. Information has just been received from Tasker H. Bliss, major general, that Major William H. Oury of Washington, D. C., has been ordered to report in person to the commander general of the central department.

Major Curry will be his permanent headquarters. Major Curry will be in charge of the purchases of all supplies and animals and will in reality be the purchasing agent for the government in Battle Creek.

All the officials now in Battle Creek are acting under power orders until the cantonment is built. Although there will be much preliminary work, Major Oury's orders are to take charge of the quartermaster's duties in maintenance of the camp.

BRING CHICAGO MEN TO WORK ON FARMS

Scarcity of Labor Makes Necessity of Importing Workers From Large Centers of Population.

Men from Chicago will be imported into Rock county to help harvest the bumper grain and hay crops. Through the government department of labor office, County Labor Agent Markham has already secured three men, who will be assigned to farmers whose applications for help have long been on file with the county council of defense.

Mr. Markham has been in Chicago to select the men for service on Rock county farms. The shortage of labor promises to be a serious handicap in handling the crops properly. Men seeking farm work are snapped up at high wages. The supply of boys from 14 to 20 years of age who will work on farms is about half of what it used to be. To secure them has been made. All who will work have found employment, and most of them are working. Many farmers of the county are worried over the possibility of a draft affecting the labor situation, and it is possible that some concerted action will be taken to secure the exemption of farmer boys and expert farm laborers.

In the meantime the county defense council is bending every energy to secure up men to supply the ever increasing demand.

WILL PROBABLY NOT CALL COMPANY NOW

Indications Are That Local Guard Unit Will Remain at Home Station for Ten Days or More.

Present conditions now indicate that the company will not be called for mobilization at Camp Douglas for ten days or possibly two weeks, though the company has been ordered to hold itself in readiness for immediate action. The company is expected to leave with but a few hours' notice.

It is thought that the outbreak of a case of smallpox in the Beloit company, which prevents their mobilization is responsible for the delay in calling the local unit. Until the company does leave, however, the intensive training under which the men are being prepared for their military life is continuing with unabated energy. Each day, as the men become more accustomed to the rigors of their military duties, they are given a more work, and are trained in the more difficult maneuvers of the soldier.

Two more names, those of Privates Lawrence Lee and Hamilton, now appearing in the company's roster, are expected, many of the men who have been drafted to go out on the first call, now can realize the advantage of a military education.

Edgerton Platoon Here. Under the command of Lieutenant Ernest Woods, formerly United States drill sergeant attached to Company M, the entire Edgerton platoon of the Stoughton company, came to Janesville this afternoon by automobile to drill with rifles loaned them by Company M. The platoon has as yet not received any equipment from the government, and took advantage of the local unit's general training in the manual of arms. Lieutenant Woods took the men into the Court House park for a brief drill period.

Henry Waaga from Near Lima, Lured to Secluded and Dark Street by Youth He Met in Barroom.

Patrolmen led by Night Captain Thomas Morrissy, searched Monterey last night for three young men, one of them an ex-ferret school inmate, according to Henry Waaga, 32, farm hand, who reported to the police that he had been lured from a saloon at closing time and robbed on a dark street in the lower part of the city. The three men, who were of different ages, were taken to a police station where they were held for a few days. Waaga was found running bareheaded across the Five Points up Pleasant street, after dark, seeking a question of a citizen, who took him to the police station. He told numerous and conflicting stories. Finally, from his statements and misstatements, it developed that Waaga met the trio in a local saloon at eleven o'clock and was invited to take a walk "for a little exercise."

His companions "exercise" developed into a robbery. Waaga was one of the arches in Monterey. Waaga lives or works near Lima.

CITY TO SAVE $280 BY PROMPT PAYMENT FOR NEW FIRE TRUCK

Commission Meets This Afternoon and Expects to Order City Clerk to Close Contract for Machine.

The city commission was scheduled to meet this afternoon and the most important piece of business at hand was the payment for the new $5,600 fire "booster" pump accepted by the city a week ago. Under the contract the city is to pay $1,000 in advance, the balance in five payments, five per cent discount is possible with payment within ten days after acceptance.

This the city administration plans to save $280 by its procedure this afternoon.

City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund will be ordered by the council to draw an order on City Treasurer George W. Muenchow for the sum of $5,320, payable from the fire and water fund, for the completion of the city's share of the bargain.

It is, city officials say, from a financial standpoint the American La France company would just as soon have the city refuse to accept the big machine. The fire apparatus is marked in such a condition now that the truck would easily return from $1,000 to $1,500 to the manufacturers over the contract price to the city.

The machine has been placed through a series of tests never before attempted locally. Chief Klein of the department of public safety, who is the official, O. K. to the machine until he had seen it working for long periods under the most severe strains and trying conditions. The company's decision is in such a condition now that the truck would easily return from $1,000 to $1,500 to the manufacturers over the contract price to the city.

James Shortney is being tutored to drive the truck regularly under the supervision of the company's demonstration engineer.

HOME GUARD UNIT GROWING RAPIDLY

Thirty Men Have Already Signed Up For Organization—Want Enrollment of 100.

Though plans for organizing a Home Guard Unit only materialized a few days ago, thirty men have already signed up. The papers left with Fred H. Koebelin, for organization purposes. Interest in the movement is growing rapidly, and every effort is being made by those already signed up to bring the enrollment to one hundred or even more.

The company is intended essentially for those men who are above military age, and who have not enlisted or been drafted. Similar organizations are springing up in many of the cities throughout the country, and in England now include practically all of the men who are unable to go to the front.

No definite knowledge regarding the equipment can be secured until the full quota of one hundred has been reached and the unit has received government recognition. It is highly probable that when the number is reached, the unit will be issued the men, and uniforms secured.

Regular drills will be held, and light training intended to keep the men in good physical condition will be undertaken. The unit will be organized in a position to fulfill their duties as a "Home Guard."

Though all are welcome, the organization of the company are especially desirous of having all former guardsmen, Spanish war veterans, and others who have seen military service enlist in the unit. There are still many men in Janesville who belonged to the old National Guard company, and it is hoped that many of them will sign up at once.

Recruits may obtain all information from Mr. Koebelin at his store on West Milwaukee street.

FIRE RISK RATES REDUCED BY STATE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., July 24.—A reduction in insurance rates which may approximate an annual saving of $600,000 was ordered by the insurance department today, and will go into effect August 1. This action follows under the regulation law enacted at the last session of the legislature.

The order issued by Insurance Commissioner Cleary is of the opinion that the present rates are excessive, and that the reduction will be accomplished by the department of insurance. The order is in effect a reduction of the rates on buildings of frame, iron clad and brick veneer construction shall on and after August 1, be reduced to the rate on buildings of like occupancy of brick or other construction.

The term rules now in effect on brick buildings is hereby changed, so that one half of a year's premium on a three year policy and a full year's premium on a five year policy. Commissioner Cleary is of the opinion that the present rates are excessive, and that the reduction will be accomplished by the department of insurance.

Since the rate regulation law became effective companies have filed with the department a reduction from brick basis rates of 50 cents to 35 cents; frame, iron clad or brick veneer, 80 to 80 cents, and preproof of thirty-seven and one-half to thirty cents.

These reductions with the ruling of the commissioner on term risks it is estimated will save Wisconsin policyholders $600,000 annually. Commissioner Cleary is of the opinion that the present rates are excessive, and that the reduction will be accomplished by the department of insurance.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIM IN CHASE FOR DAMAGES
Edgerton, July 24.—An automobile accident occurred early yesterday morning when an auto driven by Frank Oberg of Whitewater crashed into a truck driven by John Madden, of Janesville. The car was driven by Madden leaving the city, and as he turned out to pass the approaching car crashed into him. The car did not stop but proceeded toward town. Mr. Madden immediately telephoned to Mrs. Madden, who came to his assistance with their touring car, and a race immediately followed with Oberg in the lead. At Milton Oberg was overtaken as he next ten days stop because of engine trouble. His radiator was punctured, the water leaking out, and his engine had run hot. Oberg's car was damaged and was demolished and his car sustained other damage. As Mr. Madden was entirely within the right, being on the right side of the road at the time of the accident, he was not liable for the damage done to the Madden truck.

Big Tobacco Prices.
Tobacco buyers are busy these days buying the 1917 crop of tobacco. There is a shortage of the weed is apparent by the prices being paid. Prices range from 12 cents up, and the top price reported is 19 cents. In some places the buyers are taking all the risks of the tobacco from now on. One tobacco man stated this morning that at least 40 per cent of the crop was already in the hands of the packers, and that within the next ten days at least 80 per cent would be transferred to the packers. Never in the history of the tobacco market have such prices prevailed at this time of the year. The crop is expected to be favorable for harvest and curing the farmer will receive the highest prices ever paid for his tobacco crop.

SPORTS

EDDIE COLLINS, SLOW STARTER, IS TARDIER MORE SO THIS YEAR

Eddie Collins undoubtedly is feeling his age just a little bit. Always a slow starter, he is lagging more than ever this season in finding the pitcher. His average is lower now than it is his custom at this time of the year.

Collins is feeling just as brilliant in thinking just as rapidly, and is not slowing perceptibly in his base running. His appearances on first base, however, have been too few to allow much base stealing or run-scoring.

Even when Collins was with the Mack machine and enjoying the height of his ability, it always required a few weeks or more than a month for him to reach the zenith of his batting stride. Usually the end of a season found him disputing batting premiership with Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, although his average never reached the top notches set by these batting stars.

It is Collins who is swinging into his old-time batting form at this stage of the race his assistance would be sufficient in itself, it is believed by most critics, to carry the Sox to a championship. And if he should suddenly receive the assistance of Joe Jackson's old-time Cleveland form, the American league race probably would be over just about as suddenly.

Strangely, neither Jackson nor Collins have been able to hit the season's opening with batting strength since becoming members of the White Sox. Jackson's average never was so low as it is now, and it seems totally incapable of throwing the slump.

The drop of this pair in batting is one thing the dope overlooked in picking the White Sox as favorites in the Johnson scramble. They are the players who make the Sox or wreck them. Even with their batting low their efforts are sufficient inspiration to other members of the team to count a great deal.

VERSATILE KID IS BIG AID TO BRAVES

Johnny Rawlings.

With Maranville and John Evers out of the game at different times the Braves have been happy to have around so versatile a young utility player as Johnny Rawlings. Rawlings first subbed for Evers when Maranville was injured he went over to short and filled in beautifully. Though not yet a Maranville, Rawlings is a wonder as an infield utility man.

advances himself or another player toward the home plate the player should be given credit in the records, whether he makes a home run with the bases full or merely hits the ball to the infield in such a way that he advances a teammate, but is retired himself. And the records also should show the difference in the values of each performance with the bat.

John Shibe, business manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, is interested in the plan to promote boxing contests on the club's grounds, at Twenty-first street and Eighth avenue. The biggest contest arranged is the six-round bout between Johnny Kilbane and Benny Leonard on July 25. A purse of $20,000 is to be given the boxers, each receiving $10,000 or at the rate of $1,666 a round for eighteen minutes' work, or $555 a minute or $9.25 a second. It will be a no-decision contest.

E. Timothy O'Sullivan, former manager of the late Les Darcy, is now a full-fledged trainer of thoroughbred, and will race his own stable on the New York track. O'Sullivan has an ambition to shine among the great horsemen who appear at Saratoga with their strings and if he continues to accumulate racers at the rate he has followed since he got into the game, he will succeed.

CRAWFORD HOPES TO GET 30 MORE HITS

Sam Crawford.

Sam Crawford, the Tigers' utility outfielder, who is in his nineteenth season in the big leagues and next to Hans Wagner is the oldest player in the game, hopes to get some thirty odd more hits before the season is over. Sam needs them to finish out a record of 3,000 hits in fast company. With only an occasional turn at bat as a pinch hitter his chances are not so good as they might be.

who is in a fair way of winning a pennant, does not differ with the rest. Manager Stallings of the Braves insists it is so, and there would be no trouble to get an affidavit on this point from Fielder Jones of the luckless Browns.

U. S. SECRET SERVICE IS WORLD BEATER BUT NOT BOASTFUL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, July 24.—Uncle Sam doesn't make as much noise about his secret police agents as Kaiser Bill does about his Wilhelmstrasse but the star spangled scouts get there just the same.

The United States has one of the biggest secret police systems in the world.

It centers in Washington. It is composed of:

1.—The Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, headed by Bruce Lusk, in place of times this organization hunted white slaves, anti-drug law violators, and other offenders. Now it hunts German spies and pro-kaisers.

2.—The Secret Service, headed by Chief Flynn. Its main duties are to catch counterfeiters for the Treasury department, and furnish the President a secret service squad.

3.—Secret police systems of other government departments—such as postoffice inspector to nab mail law violators.

The army and navy have their own means of getting information of military value.

The biggest job right now is war work. The Secret Service throws its tentacles in every direction, feeling for plotters against the President.

The Bureau of Investigation muzzles disloyalist schemes. The army and navy sleuths dig into enemy war plans.

In their hunt for anti-American agitators, Uncle Sam's secret police mingle with crowds, participate in mass-meetings, use the telephone. If a mob gathers, the chances are a quiet gentleman with a little badge in his pocket is among those present.

They incline an ear to the ravings of pro-Germans and by mysterious methods become aware of what America's foes are doing in Berlin as well as in New York.

Through channels Sherlock Holmes could never discover, reports come regularly into Washington, and others go out. Many Kaiser boosters, although they remain blissfully ignorant of it, are watched by the government, as at watches a mouse.

Their doings and sayings are systematically chronicled and filed away for reference in Washington.

Detailed reports come in, dealing with actions of persons, thousands of miles away in alien lands, and right here at home in Chicago, New Orleans or Los Angeles. If the Kaiser says anything worth while in his sleep, Washington has a good chance of hearing it.

Macaroni prepared in any of the various ways in combination with cheese, butter and tomatoes is nourishing.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Celebrities have had institutions and even towns named after them, but Douglas Fairbanks is perhaps the first to have a mountain peak bear his name.

It was during the production of some mountain scenes in California recently for "Down to Earth," the new Fairbanks picture that the popular actor was approached by D. G. De-mond, United States government official, who after ten minutes of eloquence concluded by saying that it was his pleasure to announce that one of the most picturesque mountain peaks had been named in his honor in Yosemite valley. The energetic Douglas thanked the official for the honor and gave his appreciation by doing a handstand on a dizzy precipice of the mountains.

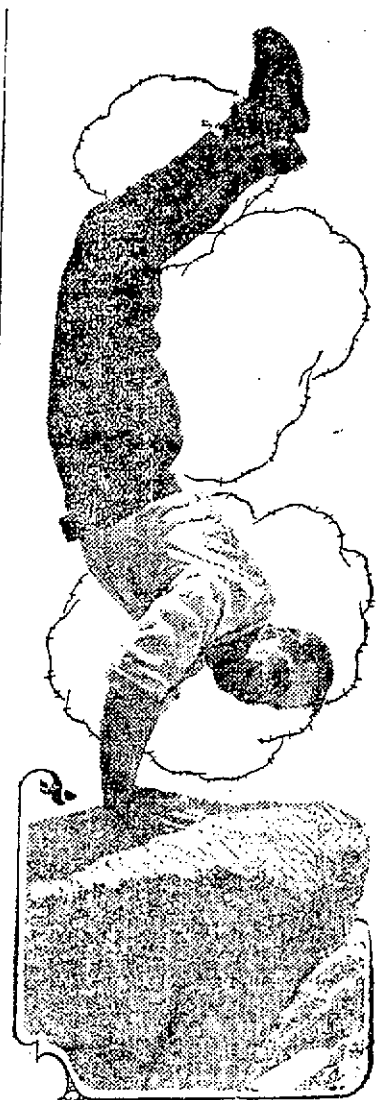

Douglas Fairbanks Peak, according to the government representative, is perhaps the most popular objective point in the whole region. On the way to this point one passes Vernal and Nevada Falls, returning down the shore of Lake Agassiz, Columbia and Sentinel Rock. There is a comfortable hotel on the summit and many take the stage here for the Big Trees, overlooking the full trip from Sentinel Peak on the valley floor. The projecting rocks which mark Douglas Fairbanks Peak are but a few yards from the hotel. Upon returning from his trip to the mountain top, Fairbanks announced his intention of building a cabin on his lofty land where he will spend his time between the production of pictures.

SWAT THE CRITIC!

Hebrew Brown, a highbrow director, rises to protest in a formal, intelligent and right-from-the-dictionary language, against the reviewing of picture plays by mere newspaper reporters. "Our screen plays are worthy of criticism by dramatic critics, not by three-for-a-penny reporters who have neither analytical nor critical minds. We need and want criticism, but not the kind that either slaps a play over with sentiment or ignores it altogether," he says.

Furthermore they are lending cooperation of a character valued by the government. Conservation of materials, and most of all, protection of the money market, are matters of importance.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question: Please tell me the best method for setting celery? Do you advise putting in trench to facilitate blanching?

Answer: The trench method of growing celery is no longer as popular as formerly. Aside from the extra labor involved in digging it has some disadvantages that are difficult to overcome. The celery in trenches is not easy to cultivate and the heavy rains wash the trenches full of soil.

A good way to raise celery is to use cold frames or hot beds. Without the sash, of course. When these are no longer needed in the spring, or at this time of the year, if you are transplanting late celery, set the plants in the frames. They should be set in squares six inches each way. In this way the space in the hot-beds is utilized and the rich soil as well. The plants should be kept well watered at all times. If you have no hot-bed you may use what is called the New Celery Culture, in which the celery is planted in rows, the plants being set six inches apart. In this way you vary from six inches apart to eight or nine inches, or even forty-eight inches apart. J. G. Moore recommends rows twenty-four inches apart as a good distance for the home garden, as that gives room enough for cultivation and yet utilizes the ground. This method can only be used where the soil is very rich and there is plenty of moisture. The rich soil the closer the rows of celery may be. Very little blanching is necessary where the method of close setting is used as the plants shade one another.

If there is a lack of moisture, Mr. Moore recommends mulching the ground when the celery is six or eight inches high with well rotted horse manure. If this is not available straw, leaves, or marsh hay may be used. The mulch should be three or four inches deep and after it is put on further cultivation is unnecessary. The soil for celery should be cool, loose, and moist.

Farmers Plan for Fall Grain Crop. Winter wheat and rye are sure to bring good prices and wherever possible to do so farmers should begin planning for these crops. Grain may be raised and thus the ground made ready for plowing as early as possible. Many farmers are planning to use new land or old pastures and meadows for fall grain. Some farmers are going to put grain on land now in peas, and in the central part of the state rye will be sown in with the standing corn in the last cultivation.

As in the spring sowing it is important that the very best of seed be used. There is a campaign on for the conservation of pedigreed seed grain for seeding purposes. It is thought that Wisconsin will not be able to supply all of its required winter wheat seed but the State Agricultural Experiment association will help in efforts to get seed from reliable growers in adjoining states. It is expected that fall will be plenty of rye for seed for fall.

Look Out Now for Cabbage Worms.

These are days when you will see white moths flying about your cabbage plants. Later you will find holes in the leaves made by green worms. The larvae of the white moth. These worms are very numerous some years and do a great deal of damage. The moths are destroyed the better.

There are three remedies recommended in the "Wisconsin Horticulture." In early morning when the plants are wet, dust with three parts of air-slacked lime and two of Paris Green or arsenate of lead. Second: Apply either the arsenate or Paris Green in liquid form, two ounces (ten heaping teaspoons) of the powder to a gallon and a half of water, preferably soap water as that makes it stick and spread better. As has been said before, the lead arsenate is to be preferred to the Paris Green both because of the high cost of the latter and because it sticks to the foliage better. Third: Fresh hellebore or pyrethrum may be substituted for the Paris Green and lead arsenate.

BAIT CASTING LINES.

My Dear Buck:

Many a fish, old scout, has been lost on the first three feet of the line, not on account of the weakness of the entire line, or poor quality, but solely from the wear and fraying on the end of the bait casting line due to the friction on the guides and the pull of the bait in its start to the fish. The wear is far greater on the first few feet of the line than any other part, and to be sure of your fish, you must be sure of the strength of that basic part of your tackle, the line that lands 'em. One of the big points to remember in the care of the line is to test it every now and then and break off a foot or two when it shows weakness. The snapping of a good line can be avoided by this little precaution.

Soft Braid Versus Hard Braid. The only line to be considered for bait casting is the braided silk, and of this kind we have the choice between the hard and soft braided. Of the former it can be said it wears well and absorbs practically no water, but as a casting line it takes a back seat to the soft braided affair. Owing to the ease with which the soft braided line slides from the reel, it makes the best possible line for casting, and you can thumb it all day without burning the thumb into the quick, which is more than you can say for the hard braided.

For general bait casting with plugs and artificial lures of the wobbler variety you should have a No. 5 line. Some manufacturers lettering their product make a G size which corresponds to the No. 5. For the lighter lures of the spoon, pork rind and minnow class let your selection be a No. 6 or H size.

Don't Use a Rope. The big mistake of the beginner, as well as lots of sure-fire fishermen, old man, is to select a line that is too large and heavy. It is absolutely impossible to do accurate casting with a big, heavy, clumsy line, and at that it is entirely unnecessary. With the ordinary tackle few fishermen can put more than four or five pounds pull on the line if the rod is used properly, and if it is not the rod will "go" before the line.

I do not think it is necessary to use a line of greater test strength than 12 or 15 pounds for ordinary casting, unless, of course, you are casting for muskie, northern pike or pickerel. For general bass casting a 15-pound test line will more than fill the bill and at the same time keep your line down to a size that will make your casting far easier than with the heavier and more bulky line which piles up on your reel so quick that it fouls on the reel pillars and makes casting about as enjoyable as handling a towline on a tug.

Dry Your Line After Fishing. One of the simplest ways to put a good line out of the game is to let it dry on the reel; do this a few times, Buck, and your line is a. g., no matter what high quality goods you started with. In drying on a reel only the top layers of the line really dry; the balance molds and rots so as to be in fine shape to break when you hook that big one. All of which points to the fact that you should reel out your line after each day's fishing, hanging it between two convenient trees and let it dry out thoroughly before putting it to bed. Don't let it lie along the ground or dry out in the sun, and with the above care you will add 100 per cent to its life.

Another way to put a good casting line on the hummer is to use it for trolling. No matter how many swivels you have on your line while trolling, it will become so twisted that casting with it will become a "world's series" of back lashes. When you think it's time to use a new line for casting, shoot the old one into the trolling department, and die happy casting the new one.

Easy to Waterproof a Line. To avoid soaking up too much water in your casting line, which makes it heavy, you can waterproof it by saturating it in a solution of vaseline and light oil. You can apply the oil either by rubbing it into the line with a well-soaked cloth or apply it in bulk by heating the oil (not boiling) and soaking the entire line at once. If you oil the line while still on the original spool let it soak about 20 to 30 minutes; if you have the line wrapped loosely on a stick much shorter time, about ten minutes, will do the trick. In either case wipe off all the surplus oil. This will not only waterproof your line, but will make it pliant and flexible and the lubricant will reduce the friction on the guides, saving wear on the line and aid it in running smoothly and easily under the thumb.

HOW TO JUDGE A WOMAN BY HER HAIR

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best of getting some shampoo from your dresser, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil, and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

WOMEN TOO AMBITIOUS

Excessive ambition leads all sorts of women to exert themselves beyond their strength. The girl striving for honors in school, the busy housewife, the shop girl, the society climber or ladder, all overtax their natural powers of endurance. Then come nervous troubles, backaches, headaches, frequently organic troubles, which render them almost to despair.

Women suffering thus should first recognize the necessity of putting on the brakes and slowing down. Besides this, to remedy the mischief already done to their health, the best reliance is upon that famous and standard medicine for women's ailments, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Real Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kitchell Webster

(Copyright 1916, The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

She would have spoken then if she could have commanded her voice, and as it was, the sound she made conveyed her intention to him, for he turned upon her quickly as if to interrupt the unspoken words, and went on with an almost savage bitterness:

"Oh, I'm under no illusions about it. I had my chance to see, when seeing would have meant something to you—helped you. When anyone but the blindest sort of fool would have seen, I didn't. Now, when the thing is part of the world to see—now that you've won your fight without any help from me... Without any help! In spite of every hindrance that my idiosyncrasy could put in your way! Now, after all—I come and tell you that you've earned the thing you've set out to get."

There was a little silence after that. She got up and took the post he had abandoned at the window.

"Why did you do it, Roddy?" she asked. "I mean, why did you want to come and tell me?"

"Why, in the first place," he said, "I wanted to get back a little of my self-respect. I couldn't get that until I'd told you."

This time the silence was longer. "What else did you want?" she asked. "What—in the second place?"

"I want to earn your friendship. It's the biggest thing I can hope for. But I've no idea that you can hand it out to me ready-made. I believe you'd do it if you could. But you said once, yourself, that it wasn't a thing that could be given. It was a thing that had to be earned. And you were right about that, as you were about so many other things. Well, I'm going to try to earn it."

"Is that—all you want?" she asked, and then, hearing the little gasp he gave, she swung around quickly and looked at him. It was pretty dark in the room, but his face in the dusk seemed to have whitened.

"Is friendship all you want of me, Roddy?" she asked again. She stood there waiting, a full minute, in silence. Then she said: "You don't have to tell me that. Because I know. Oh—oh, my dear, how well I know!"

He didn't come to her; just stood there, gripping the corner of her bookcase and staring at her silhouette, which was about all he could see of her against the window. At last he said, in a strained, dry voice she'd hardly have known for his:

"If you know that—if I've let you see that—then I've done just about the last deplorable thing there was left for me to do. I've come down here and—made you feel sorry for me. So that with that—divine kindness of yours, you're willing to give me—everything."

He straightened up and came a step nearer. "Well, I won't have it, I tell you. I don't know how you guessed. If I'd dreamed I was betraying that to you—"

"I don't know—it's burnt into me so that I'll never forget—what the memory of my love must be to you? The memory of the hideous things it's done to you? And now, after all that—after you've won your fight—alone—and stand where you stand now—for me to come begging! And take a gift like that! I tell you it is pity. It can't be anything else."

There was another minute of silence, and then he heard her make a little noise in her throat, a noise that would have been a sob had there not been something like a laugh in it. The next moment she said, "Come over here, Roddy," and as he hesitated, as if he hadn't understood, she added: "I want you to look at me. Over here, where there's light enough to see me by."

He came, wondering, very slowly, but at last with her outstretched hand she reached him and drew him around between her and the window.

"Look into my face," she commanded. "Look into my eyes—as far in as you can. Oh, my dearest—" the sob that pure joy came again—"is it pity that you see? Don't you understand?"

He did understand it with his mind, but he was a little dazed, like one who has stood too near where the lightning struck. The hope he had kept buried alive so long—buried alive because it wouldn't die—could not be brought out into a blinding glory like this without pain—exquisite, terrifying pain.

The knowledge she had acquired by her own suffering stood her in good stead now. She did not mistake, as the Rose he had married might have done, the weakness of his response for coldness—indifference. She led him over to her one big chair and made him sit down in it, settled herself upon the arm of it, and contented herself with one of his hands. Presently he took one of hers, bent his face down over it, and brushed the back of it with his lips.

The timidity of that caress, with all it revealed to her, was too much for her. She swallowed a sob, and another, but the next one got away from her and she broke out in a passionate fit of weeping. That roused him from his daze a little, and he pulled her down in his arms—held her tight—comforted her. When she got herself in hand again, she got up, went away to wash her face, and, coming back in the room again, lighted a reading lamp and drew down the blinds.

"Rose," he said presently, "what are we going to do?"

"Shall we make it a real honeymoon, Roddy—make it as complete as we can? Forget everything and let all the world be—"

He supplied the word for her, "Rose—color?"

She accepted it with a little laugh "for a while?"

"That's what I was fumbling for," he said, "but I can't think very straight tonight. I've got it now, though. That cottage we had—before the twins were born—down on the Cape. There won't be a soul there this time of year. We'll have the world to ourselves."

"Yes," she said, "for a little while, we'd want it like that. But after a while—after a day or two, could we have the babies? Could the nurse bring them on to me and then go straight back, so that I could have them, and you, all together?"

He said, "You darling!" But he couldn't manage more than that.

At the entrance and just out of range of the elevator man, he kissed her good night.

"But will you telephone to me as soon as you wake up in the morning, so that I'll know it's true?"

She nodded. Then her eyes went wide and she clung to him. "Is it true, Roddy? Is it possible for a thing to come back like that? Are we really the old Roddy and Rose, planning our honeymoon again? It wasn't quite three years ago. Will it be like that?"

"Not like that, perhaps," he said, "exactly. It will be better by all we've learned and suffered since."

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Beginning.

There was a sense in which this prediction of Roddy's about their honeymoon was altogether true. They had great hours—hours of an emotional intensity greater than any they had known during that former honeymoon, greater by all they had learned and suffered since—hours that repaid all that suffering, and could not have been captured at any smaller price.

But life, of course, cannot be made up of hours like that. No sane person can even want to live in a perpetual ecstasy. What makes a mortal peak is the fall away into the surrounding valleys.

In their valleys of commonplace, everyday existence—and these occurred even in their first days together—they were stiff, shy, self-conscious with each other. And their attempt to ignore this fact only made the self-consciousness the worse. It troubled and bewildered both of them.

The arrival of the twins, in the convey of a badly flustered—and, to tell the truth, a somewhat scandalized—Miss French, complicated the situation somewhat—by complicating it! They absolutely enforced routine. And they gave Rose and Roddy so many occupations that the contemplation of their complicated states of mind was much abridged.

But even her babies brought Rose a disappointment along with them. From the time of the receipt of Miss French's telegram, telling them what train she and the twins would take, Rose had been telling off the hours in mounting excitement. The two utterly adorable little creatures, the pictures of them in Roddy's pocketbook showed them to be, who were miraculously, incredibly hers, were coming to bring motherhood to her—

She didn't go to Boston with Roddy to meet them; stayed behind in the cottage, ostensibly to see to it, up to the very last minute, that the fires were right (June had come in cold and rainy), and, in general, to be ready, on the moment, to produce anything that their rather unforeseeable needs might call for. Her real reason was a shrinking from having her first meeting with them in the confusion of arrival on a station platform, under the eyes of the world. Roddy understood this well enough, and, arriving at the cottage, he clambered out of the wagon with them and carried them both straight in to Rose, leaving the nurse and the bewildering paraphernalia of travel for a second trip.

Rose, in the passionate surge of gratified desire that came with the sight of them, caught them from him, crushed them up against her breast—and frightened them half to death. So that, without dissimulation, they howled and brought Miss French flying to the rescue.

Rose didn't make a tragedy of it; managed a smile at herself, though she suspected she'd cry when she got the chance, and subjected her ideas to an instantaneous revision. They were persons, those two funny little mites, with their own ideas, their own preferences, and the perfectly adequate conviction of being entitled to them. How would she herself have liked it, to have a total stranger, fifteen feet high or so, snatch her like that?

She was rather apologetic all day, and got her reward, especially from the boy, who was an adventurous and rather truculent baby, much, she fancied, as his father must once have been, and who took to her more quickly than the girl did. Indeed, the second Rodney fell in love with her almost as promptly as his father had done before him. But little Portia wasn't very far behind. Two days sufficed for the conquest of the pair of them.

The really disquieting discovery awaited the time when the wire edge of novelty about this adventure in motherhood had worn off; when she could bathe them, dress them, feed them, their very strident regimented meals, without being spurred to the highest pitch of alertness by the fear of making a mistake—forgetting something like the juice of a half-orange at ten o'clock in the morning, the omission of which might have—who knew what disastrous consequences!

That attitude can't last any woman long, and Rose, with her wonderfully clever hands, her wit trained not to be told the same thing twice, her pride keeping in sharp focus the determination that Rodney should see that she could be as good a nurse as Miss French—Rose wore off that nervous tenseness over her new job very quickly. Within a week she had a routine established that was noiseless—frictionless.

But, do you remember how agitated she was over the forty weeks John Galbraith had talked about as the probable run of "The Girl Upstairs," her consternation over the idea of just going on doing the same thing over and over again, "around and around, like a horse at the end of a pole?"

Well, it was with something the same feeling of consternation that, having thrown herself heart and soul into the task of planning and setting in motion a routine for two year-and-a-half-old babies, she should and herself straightening up and saying: "What next?" and realizing that, so far as this job was concerned, there was no "next." The supreme merit of her care from now on would be—barring emergencies—the placid continuation of that routine. There were no heroics about motherhood—save in emergency, once more.

It was a fine relation. It was, perhaps, the very finest in the world. But as a job, it wasn't so satisfactory. Four-fifths of it, anyway, could be done with better results, for the children, by a placid, unimaginative, tolerably stupid person who had no stronger feeling for them than the mild, temporary affection they could excite in anyone not a monster. And the other fifth of it wasn't a job at all.

On the whole, then, leaving their miraculous hours out of the account, their honeymoon, considered as an attempt to revisit Arcady, to seize a golden day which looked neither toward the future, complete in itself, perfect—was a failure.

Dinner Stories

"Oh, will he bite?" exclaimed one of the sweetest girls with a look of alarm when she saw a dancing bear on the street the other day.

"No," said the escort, "he cannot bite; he is muzzled. But he can hug."

"Oh," she said with a distracting smile, "I don't mind that."

Mrs. Will Irwin said at a Washington Square tea:

"The most immodest fashions would disappear if men would respectfully oppose them."

"I know a woman whose dressmaker sent home the other day a skirt that was, really, too short altogether. The woman put it on. It was becoming enough, dear knows, but it made her feel ashamed. She entered the library, and her husband looked up from his work with a dark frown."

"I wonder," she said, with a embarrassed laugh, "if these ultra-short skirts will ever go out?"

"They'll never go out with me," he answered in decided tones.

At one time Kid Brown, a famous dance hall proprietor and early-day character of Alaska, was approached by a gambler and requested to lend him $100. Without saying a word, Kid punched the cash register, pulled out a five and handed it to the gambler.

"What?" said the latter. "Didn't I ask you for a ten-spot?"

"Kid shifted his chew of tobacco over to the other side of his mouth, kicked his slippers in the corner and drawled in his characteristic decision: 'We both lose five.'"
